Hi Rachel:

I listened to Suzanne and read the articles in the News Links. Interesting times in Pueblo City Schools. I don't really see a solution. The reserves are basically down to nothing in Pueblo so it isn't fiscally smart to use them to pay for salary increases which is where the mediator found the money for raises. All they can really do is increase the FTE cuts by raising class size in order to save that much money. It's a really tough place for a district to be. I am hoping a solution is found this weekend. I am sure they are still negotiating. If not, I wonder how long the strike will last? I worry that it will become a hold out on both sides without talking. Yikes, scary times!
